

Today's Quiz: name that Disney fairytale!

Resolution!

You've reached the end of your fairytale!

All you need now is to find a way for everybody (except the villain) to live happily ever after.

The villain cannot die too much of a gruesome death. They can: shrivel; explode; vanish into thin air; be locked in an oven and baked; turn to stone; turn into an unpleasant animal; be locked in an isolated cottage forever; drop down dead.

My resolution

Finally, Mr Hobgoblin made his decision. He challenged the wicked little frog to a competition – who could hold their breath for the longest. This way he didn't have to be too mean, because he had decided he didn't really like meanness anymore. He went outside with the wicked little frog and they both took a deep breath. Mr Hobgoblin breathed in as hard as he could to fill his lungs. The wicked little frog tried to beat him by breathing in more air, and more air, and still more air until...he went 'pop!'. The wicked little frog had exploded into a million little pieces, and the Royal Family danced and cheered. Mr Hobgoblin promised to never be mean ever again and from then on the sun was always shining above Mr Hobgoblin and little Princess Cutecheeks. And they all lived happily ever after.

Write your resolution now. Write at least 50 words. Write as much as you need to finish your fairytale off with a flourish.

Change the last sentence: And they all lived _____ ever after

The villain dies in a comical manner

Help me satirise!

Your hero does not save the day – instead your damsel in distress does.

The hero and princess choose not to get married because they don't like each other very much